The First Stance

Opening

"Preview was a lot of fun. It was great to get a slice of what life would be like for the next four years. However, Preview is not exactly like college. Preview aims to give you a glimpse of the educational benefits of college and does a great job of doing so. Yet it does not emphasize enough the things that you will remember until your dying day—all the friends you'll cherish and all the fun you'll have at college. Robbie Winston—Freshman

Students from a diversity of places come together in a unique atmosphere for the first time at Preview. Preview as well as many other events that take place give incoming freshmen a chance to get accustomed to the fast pace life that college offers. The Orientation leaders show the newcomers around while they get to know a whole new array of people and learn more about Longwood College. Color Wars is also an exciting event that everyone looks forward to where class struggles become all fun and games. Overall, the beginning of the year at Longwood offers many new and exciting opportunities as students take their FIRST STANCE in the beginning of their journey.

Students A New Direction At

PREVIEW

Preview, for many incoming freshmen, was their first experience at Longwood College. The purpose of preview is to give incoming students a sample of college life while getting some important business accomplished. The days were jammed with activities, ranging from the dreaded placement tests, registering for classes to enjoyable activities and games. Preview was the first chance for the incoming students to meet new friends and experience for the first time the roommate situation. All of the Freshmen spent the night in Curry which led to an exciting evening of socializing and goofing off. Not unlike the life to come, these two days were full of interaction between all different types of people, most of whom were complete strangers. Preview was the beginning of the long road of change and growth that would be traveled on the next few years of their lives.

COLOR WARS

Color Wars are a long standing tradition of Longwood College. Every Oktoberfest rival classes are united to work together. This year Freshmen and Juniors fought under the green and white colors, while Sophomores and Seniors wore red and white. The wars were as heated as ever but ended with a surprise. The red and white Sophomores and Seniors won the first event which was the Dizzy-Izzy and sought another victory in the shoe relay. However, when it looked like the red and white team had won, the Freshmen and Juniors fought back with spirit and won the last two events which were tug-of-war and the paint wars. Each team won two of the four events and color wars took a twist of tradition as it ended in a tie. Jenn Short, a Freshmen participant summed it up in a phrase: "Color wars were the best!"

Steve Jacobson, a junior, joins in the battles at Color Wars with spirit.

The Circle Of Friendships Begin In

Dorm Life

A slam of a door and the blaring from a stereo introduce dorm life. Quickly, your dorm becomes your home away from home. Friends up and down the hall become like neighbors. With so many people living on a hall or in one building, free time can hardly be expected. Simply walk down the hall one way or the other and there's always someone there. With all of those people, nor is there a silent moment. Living with different types of people makes dorm life full of compromise. Loud people who live near quiet people.

Night people who live with morning people. After the first two weeks, the politeness fades and reality settles in. The R.A. is there at the end of the hall to maintain order. With new responsibility and freedom, rules are sure to follow. Nothing is more convincing of this than your first write-up. Dorm life, not unlike college, provides new and interesting challenges that everyone must overcome. Overall, resident hall life gives way for New Circles of Friendships.

Farrah sampson, Sarah Red and Jacki Hawkins.

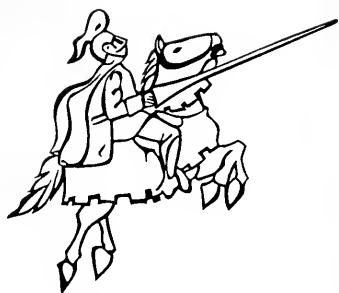

Gunny Eaton, Lori McGee and Molly Cows enjoy a picnic lunch during Preview.

Karen Patton, Cara and Teresa McIntire take a break from school work to hang out.

Justin Bunch and Ben Davies enjoy the time away from school and classes.

A Social Journey

Student Life

"Longwood has provided me with opportunities to grow both mentally and emotionally. The experiences that I've gained while attending Longwood College will contribute much to my success in the future and remain a vital part of my intellectual growth. Overall, Longwood gave me opportunities and experiences unlike those I would have gotten elsewhere." Kimberly Carol Burke—Senior (DOUBLE MAJOR IN PSYCHOLOGY AND ELEMENTARY EDUCATION)

Student Life is a very important part of the Longwood community. Students get to know each other by going to classes, living in dormitories, joining clubs, and having fun at parties. The fountain, Lancer Cafe, dining hall, and dorm rooms are a few of the many popular hangouts on campus. Some of the many events students look forward to include Oktoberfest and Spring Weekend. Both of these events bring a multitude of opportunities for students, perspective students, parents, faculty members, and other interested people a lot of exciting activities. Overall, the students of Longwood come together in A SOCIAL JOURNEY through some of the best times in life—the college years.

OKTOBERFEST

A JOURNEY THROUGH TRADITION

Oktoberfest is made possible by the members of Mortar Board. They planned the festivities for the big weekend with a lot of diversity and tradition. The parade opened the festivities for the days on Oktoberfest. The Longwood Cheerleaders and Lancer line made a high-energy performance giving preview of what they are all about to potential students, Longwood students and parents. The Gospel Choir also sung for the crowd while kid's games were being participated in. Along with the entertainment, many booths were decorated as they competed to be the winner. Overall, Oktoberfest was a spirited chain of events that brought many exciting opportunities to everyone. Meanwhile, it also gave students a JOURNEY THROUGH TRADITION.

PEOPLE

Traveling Faces

Each year brings a plethora of new people into the Longwood College educational system. Considering the enrollment size, the students at Longwood are bound to acquire numerous friends either by happenstance or through informal introduction. The faces that are seen around campus reflect the personality of the college. With each passing year, new ideas are brought forth as a diversity of people enter Longwood. Overall, as students conquer the journey through college with determination and courage, each student meets a lot of "traveling faces."

Clubs & Organizations

Business or Pleasure

Organizations are a big part of campus life. They vary from religious to recreational clubs and organizations. "A club is not only a fun thing to do but you also get to meet new people," said Kelly York (freshman). Longwood's clubs are not just for fun, however, there are also some very serious aspects to them. On October 14th, SAFE sponsored "Take Back The Night" which was a protest against rape on campus. Therefore, as one can clearly see, clubs are not just for pleasure, but they are also there to take care of business.

CLOSING

Mission Accomplished

The closure of each passing year brings about both laughter and tears. As these seniors reflect on their past friendships and accomplishments, they feel a sense of pride and sadness. As the seniors further reflect on the journey ahead of them, they sense dual feelings of confidence and fear. Furthermore, underclassmen find themselves saying good-bye for the summer and feelings as if they are once again moving to a new location. Overall, the feelings associated with wrapping up another year may be confusing and exciting, but every student at least knows that it is a "mission accomplished."
